

Heat Exchanger Service Unit with Concentric Tube Heat Exchanger

1. Experimental Objectives:

- Determine whether parallel-flow or counter-flow is better for heat transfer in concentric tube heat exchanger.
- Study the effect of fluid flow rates on heat exchanger performance.
- Calculate effectiveness of a concentric tube heat-exchanger for parallel flow and counter flow configuration

2. Theory:

- 2.1) Concentric tube heat exchanger: Concentric tube heat exchanger is a simple heat exchanger. It has two tubes. One tube carries hot fluid, the other carries cold fluid. Heat is transferred between them. Thermal sensors are placed at the inlets and outlets of both tubes. An extra two sensors are also placed at the midpoints of both tubes. This gives more useful experiment results, to show more clearly how the fluid temperatures change during heat transfer.

Heat exchangers are devices designed to transfer heat from one fluid to another, without the fluids coming into contact. The heat transferred between the pipes is by the phenomenon called conduction. Conduction is the transfer of energy from molecules to molecules by direct contact; the molecules themselves do not necessarily change position, but simply vibrate more or less quickly against each other.
