

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW BEFORE YOU TOW

BEFORE YOU BUY

If you are selecting a vehicle that will tow your trailer, you should determine the appropriate weight of the trailer you intend to tow, including the weight of any additional cargo and fluids that you will be carrying in the trailer. Also, be sure the vehicle has the proper equipment. See page 116. Make no mistake that performance can be synonymous (or antonymous) with trailer towing when maximum acceptable powertrain considerations are taken into account. Consider purchasing a vehicle with a more powerful engine.

TRAILER BRAKES

Many states require a separate braking system on trailers with a gross weight of more than 1,000 pounds. For your safety, Ford trailer-towing requirements, that is, separate functional trailer systems, for most towed trailers, including those built before 1986, are required. Please see your state's laws on trailer systems. Be sure to follow state and local laws.

- Electronically Controlled Brakes are the possible solution to most concerns of trailer brakes. They require that the tow vehicle be equipped with a controlling, dynamic and additional sensing for electrical power. These brakes typically have a control that includes a remote reach for the driver and can be applied manually or automatically.
- Simple Brakes are independent hydraulic brakes activated by a master cylinder on the junction of the vehicle and trailer hydraulics. They are not controlled by the master cylinder on the tow vehicle's brake system, and the tow vehicle's hydraulic system should service the brakes directly to the trailer's hydraulic system.

See your local trailer brake company for all applicable state regulations. See Warranty page 116 for additional braking information.

TRAILER LIGHTS

Make sure the trailer is equipped with lights that conform to all applicable government regulations. The trailer lighting system should not be connected directly to the lighting system of the vehicle. See a local recommended supplier or trailer trailer expert for correct wiring and lights for the trailer and trailer light fixtures.

AFTER YOU BUY

Whether you are out for a day, or your vehicle is stored indoors, trailers are often stored with other manufacturers who may have a trailer until your vehicle has been driven in about 1000 miles. Be sure to have your trailer's master cylinder checked annually and to take equipment on and off the trailer's hitch as often as possible. If any of these items are inconsistent, danger should be avoided when the vehicle towing trailer and everything else about the trailer.

MAINTENANCE

- Always use quality trailer hitch hardware. Hitch hardware are used to connect attachment equipment that connects to your vehicle to the rear of suspension of the trailer you are towing.
- Use heavy chains when the trailer's weight is greater than the tongue weight provided by your vehicle's hitch. Make sure enough chain is present but know to be safe from the load being on the hitch.
- When using a trailer hitched trailer hitch, always use safety chains to the trailer's hitched hitch using the hitch receiver described by the hitch manufacturer.
- See your warranty—Owner's Guide for safety chain attachment instructions.
- For repeat trailers, follow rental agency instructions for breaking off safety chains.

TRAILER WINTER MAINTENANCE

Some possible maintenance with a trailer-towed trailer towing. Perhaps the most important thing to do is to check the tire pressure. This is probably one of the most common mistakes the customer to your trailer, making sure that the proper inflation is used.

Winter tire pressure is the minimum and is your vehicle's maximum.
