PSYCHOLOGY OF ADDICTION

In all the more prominent interdisciplinary contexts of the systematic struggle against addiction, psychology has recognized as a profession its space for action, both in the area of prevention and in the field of suppression of addiction and treatment of addicts. But it may have been less exploited as science, and more as an aiding activity. However, psychology is increasingly actively involved in solving socially relevant public health issues in areas that have recently been "reserved" for the medical profession until recently. Psychologists as members of multidisciplinary teams currently have insufficiently defined, but solidly affirmed and fully recognizable and recognized positions of health care professionals in the health care system, as well as the position of professional associates in the system of education, social care and other systems. The independent role of a psychologist has so far been linked solely to the clinical approach to addiction treatment and addictive behavior, while also limiting it to reactive action (when the problem arises) while proactive action remains inadequate and sporadic and hence inefficient. Preventive activities rely heavily on specific education, psychoeducation and supportive practices, so psychology "has become" the only profession that in the system of early identification of problems, prevention, early interventions and later treatment (addicts) can offer a complete set of scientific knowledge based interventions. This psychology as an expert gives a leading role in trying to make the problem of addiction as small as it is quite certain that in the near future this problem will not come to an end. Inadequate to psychology is that a relatively small number of psychologists deal with addiction psychology, and those who are too busy dealing with them are investigating the phenomenon, analyzing the opportunities and limitations of the profession and failing to publicize the texts about new knowledge and experience.

Sources of Knowledge (Through Creative And Systematic Research Work) ,2025-08-15 Knowledge is a form of familiarity awareness understanding or acquittance It often involves the possession of information learned through experience and can be understood as a cognitive success or an epistemic contact with reality like making a discovery Knowledge is often understood as a state of an individual person but it can also refer to a characteristic of a group of people as group knowledge social knowledge or collective knowledge Some social sciences understand knowledge as a broad social phenomenon that is similar to culture Knowledge is closely related to intelligence but intelligence is more about the ability to acquire, process and apply information while knowledge concerns information and skills that a person already possesses Knowledge can be produced in many ways The main source of empirical knowledge is perception which involves the usage of the senses to learn about the external world. Introspection allows people to learn about their internal mental states and processes. Other sources of knowledge include memory, rational intuition, inference and testimony. According to foundationalism, some of these sources are basic in that they can justify beliefs without depending on other mental states. Coherentists reject this claim and contend that a sufficient degree of coherence among all the mental states of the believer is necessary for knowledge. According to infinitism, an infinite chain of beliefs is needed.

Handbook of Clinical Psychology in Medical Settings Jerry J. Sweet, Ronald H. Rozensky, Steven M. Tovian, 1991-04-30 For two decades I have been responding to questions about the nature of health psychology and how it differs from medical psychology behavioral medicine and clinical psychology. From the beginning I have taken the position that any application of psychological theory or practice to problems and issues of the health system is health psychology. I have repeatedly used an analogy to Newell and Simon's General Problem Solver program of the late 1950s and early 1960s which had two major functional parts in addition to the executive component. One was the problem solving core the procedural competence the other was the representation of the problem environment. In the analogy the concepts knowledge and techniques of psychology constitute the core competence the health system in all its complexity is the problem environment. A health psychologist is one whose basic competence in psychology is augmented by a working knowledge of some aspect of the health system. Quite apparently there are functionally distinct aspects of health psychology to the degree that there are meaningful subdivisions in psychological competence and significantly different microenvironments within the health system. I hesitate to refer to them as areas of specialization as the man who gave health psychology its formal definition Joseph Matarazzo has said that there are no specialties in psychology cited in the editors preface to this book.
