

Classical Argumentative Essay Sample

When we speak of "classical" argument, we are not speaking of famous speeches, though many of history's most memorable and persuasive speeches have partaken of classical form. The term "classical" as we will understand it in this class denotes a formal arrangement, a way of structuring an oration or prose argument so that its parts fall in a certain order. Obviously, for those parts to be arranged in such an order, they must be present in the text in the first place. We study classical rhetorical form not to tie ourselves to emulation of past rhetors, but rather so that we will have a common foundation from which to understand the historic arguments of the past and the best arguments of our own time. Much has changed in the thousands of years since argument was formalized, but much – a surprising amount – has remained the same.

A classical argument falls into five parts. They are the exordium, the narratio, the partitio, the refutatio, the confirmatio, and the peroratio. Let's examine them in order.

Exordium. This is the opener, the attention-getter, the part of the argument that reaches out to your reader (or listener) and grabs him or her by the buttonhole. It should be designed with care, not only because it sets the rhetorical tone for the rest of your argument, but also because it is your first (and perhaps last) opportunity to involve your reader in the topic of your argument.

The best exordia will build a bridge of words between your topic and your reader's interests and concerns. For this reason, the most effective exordia are often audience-specific: they address themselves to a particular, well-defined group of readers who (presumably) share certain concerns and interests. Think of early women's rights speakers who directly addressed other women instead of trying to persuade men, or think of African-American abolitionists who targeted Christian white women with religious appeals, all in the first paragraphs or first few seconds of their arguments.

Sometimes, an exordium will seem urgent and forceful. This is an attempt on the part of the rhetor to insist upon the importance and timeliness (the khaires) of his or her argument. At other times, the tone will be calmer, even cheerful. Different tones serve different persuasive designs, and only you

Sometimes, an exordium will seem urgent and forceful. This is an attempt on the part of the rhetor to insist upon the importance and timeliness (the khaires) of his or her argument. At other times, the tone will be calmer, even cheerful. Different tones serve different persuasive designs, and only you can determine what tone to employ in your argument. Be convinced, however, that the tone you set in the beginning of your text is the tone your audience will expect you to maintain throughout that text. Should you have a compelling reason to change tones (as when a rhetor goes from a cheerful, humorous tone to one of mounting despair or anger), do so with care. Careful readers pick up on these

Essays Papers Causal Argument:

A Neomedieval Essay in Philosophical Theology Ramon M. Lemos, 2001-01-01 This extended essay presents the meditations of an eminent scholar on medieval philosophical theology. Beginning with a discussion of faith and reason Ramon M Lemos argues that we can be practically justified in accepting certain religions even though we may not know that their central claims are true. Lemos moves on to his operational definition of God based on St Anselm's concept of God as a being that which no greater can be conceived. From this ground he considers various medieval arguments for the existence of God and refutes the ability of the major arguments to succeed in demonstrating God's existence. He concludes that it is impossible to demonstrate the existence of God philosophically. This provocative book addresses the fundamental issues in the philosophy of religion from a Christian perspective while maintaining the necessary intellectual distance between revealed theology and philosophy.

Automated Essay Scoring Beata Beigman Klebanov, Nitin Madnani, 2022-05-31 This book discusses the state of the art of automated essay scoring, its challenges, and its potential. One of the earliest applications of artificial intelligence to language data along with machine translation and speech recognition, automated essay scoring has evolved to become both a revenue generating industry and a vast field of research with many subfields and connections to other NLP tasks. In this book we review the developments in this field against the backdrop of Elias Page's seminal 1966 paper titled The Imminence of Grading Essays by Computer. Part 1 establishes what automated essay scoring is about, why it exists, where the technology stands, and what are some of the main issues. In Part 2 the book presents guided exercises to illustrate how one would go about building and evaluating a simple automated scoring system, while Part 3 offers readers a survey of the literature on different types of scoring models, the aspects of essay quality studied in prior research, and the implementation and evaluation of a scoring engine. Part 4 offers a broader view of the field, inclusive of some neighboring areas, and Part 5 closes with summary and discussion. This book grew out of a week long course on automated evaluation of language production at the North American Summer School for Logic, Language and Information (NASSLI), attended by advanced undergraduates and early stage graduate students from a variety of disciplines. Teachers of natural language processing in particular will find that the book offers a useful foundation for a supplemental module on automated scoring. Professionals and students in linguistics, applied linguistics, educational technology, and other related disciplines will also find the material here useful.
