Introduction

Independent Journal
Saturday, October 27, 1787
[Alexander Hamilton]

To the People of the State of New York:

Amid an unequivocal experience of the inefficacy of the subsisting federal government, you are called upon to deliberate on a new Constitution for the United States of America. The subject speaks its own importance; comprehending in its consequences nothing less than the existence of the Union, the safety and welfare of the parts of which it is composed, the fate of an empire in many respects the most interesting in the world. It has been frequently remarked that it seems to have been reserved to the people of this country, by their conduct and example, to decide the important question, whether societies of men are really capable or not of establishing good government from reflection and choice, or whether they are forever destined to depend for their political constitutions on accident and force. If there be any truth in the remark, the crisis at which we are arrived may with propriety be regarded as the era in which that decision is to be made, and a wrong election of the part we shall act may, in this view, deserve to be considered as the general misfortune of mankind.

This idea will add the inducements of philanthropy to those of patriotism, to heighten the solicitude which all considerate and good men must feel for the event. Happy will it be if our choice should be directed by a judicious estimate of our true interests, unperplexed and unbiased by considerations not connected with the public good. But this is a thing more ardently to be wished than seriously to be expected. The plan offered to our deliberations affects too many particular interests, innovates upon too many local institutions, not to involve in its discussion a variety of objects foreign to its merits, and of views, passions and prejudices little favorable to the discovery of truth.

Among the most formidable of the obstacles which the new Constitution will have to encounter may readily be distinguished the obvious interest of a certain class of men in every State to resist all changes which may hazard a diminution of the power, emolument, and consequence of the offices they hold under the State establishments; and the perverted ambition of another class of men, who will either hope to aggrandize themselves by the confusions of their country, or will flatter themselves with fairer prospects of elevation from the subdivision of the empire into several partial confederacies than from its union under one government.

It is not, however, my design to dwell upon observations of this nature. I am well aware that it would be disingenuous to resolve indiscriminately the opposition of any set of men (merely because their situations might subject them to suspicion) into interested or ambitious views. Candor will oblige us to admit that even such men may be actuated by upright intentions, and it cannot be doubted that much of the opposition which has made its appearance, or may hereafter make its appearance, will spring from sources, blameless at least, if not respectable--the honest errors of minds led astray by preconceived jealousies and fears. So numerous indeed and so powerful are the causes which serve to give a false bias to the judgment, that we, upon many occasions, see wise and good men on the wrong as well as on the right side of questions of the first magnitude to society. This circumstance, if duly attended to, nation's history. The Federalist Papers were written as a series of newspaper editorials that appeared in the American colonies during 1787 and 1789 urging the ratification of the new Constitution. 85 of these essays consist of what is today considered The Federalist Papers with 77 of them published in The Independent Journal and The New York Packet between October 1787 and August 1788. A compilation of these and eight others called The Federalist or The New Constitution was published in two volumes in 1788 by J and A McLean. The Federalist Papers sought to rally support for the Constitution's approval when those three anonymously wrote them and given how different Hamilton and Madison proved to be ideologically they demonstrate how men of vastly different political ideologies came to accept the same Constitution. 225 years later the Federalist Papers are still just as relevant and influential as ever. In addition to being cited dozens of times a year by the Supreme Court in interpreting the Constitution and rendering decisions the writings also allow readers and scholars today to get into the mindset of the Founding Fathers including the Father of the Constitution himself. The Founding Documents The Federalist Papers comprehensively covers the history behind the Federalist Papers as well as some of their most famous quotes and key points. Along with pictures of important people, places and events you will learn about the Federalist Papers like you never have before in no time at all. Delegation of Authority Order from God to Christians, Form #13.007 Sovereignty Education and Defense Ministry (SEDM), 2016-02-03 Allows you to notice the government based on religious beliefs that you are not authorized by your delegation of authority from to contract with them or participate in any franchises and therefore any contracts they have are null and void. First appearing in 1787 as a series of letters to New York newspapers this collective body of work is widely considered to be among the most important historical collections of all time. Although the authors of The Federalist Papers foremost intended to influence the vote in favor of ratifying the Constitution in Federalist No 1 Hamilton explicitly set their debate in broader political terms. It has been frequently remarked he wrote that it seems to have been reserved to the people of this country by their conduct and
