

Middle Ages Research Paper World History

For the next few weeks we will be covering the Middle Ages in Europe. You will become an expert in a certain area of this time period. To do that, you will be writing a 3-4 page research paper. The essay will be due on _____, we will have a rough draft session on _____. The paper must be typed. The following information will be required in your essay:

Title Page

Include your name, class (World History), hour, and title of your paper and any other items required when in MLA or Chicago style.

Survey thesis

In your introduction you need to map out your essay (briefly state what you will be covering in your essay). To do this, you need a strong thesis statement that contains organizational categories. Remember, an introduction can be longer than a paragraph. It is also great if you have an interesting hook in the first paragraph to grab the reader.

The Body of the Paper

The body of the paper needs to cover the three organizational categories from your thesis, and needed background information, and it should contain plenty of evidence and analysis of the facts. Remember, that you should only have 1 topic per paragraph.

Conclusion

Your conclusion is the summary of your paper, do not give new information in this paragraph. Once again go over your main points from your paper and restate your thesis.

Bibliography

Cite your sources! For your last page, list all the places where you gathered the information needed for your paper. If you used a quote or paraphrase something written by someone else in your paper, cite the source within your paper and in the bibliography. You can write in MLA or Chicago Style.

Clark, 2011-04-12 Through their teaching of early Christian history and theology Elizabeth A Clark contends Princeton Theological Seminary Harvard Divinity

School Yale Divinity School and Union Theological Seminary functioned as America's closest equivalents to graduate schools in the humanities during the nineteenth century. These four Protestant institutions founded to train clergy later became the cradles for the nonsectarian study of religion at secular colleges and universities. Clark, one of the world's most eminent scholars of early Christianity, explores this development in Founding the Fathers: Early Church History and Protestant Professors in Nineteenth Century America. Based on voluminous archival materials, the book charts how American theologians traveled to Europe to study in Germany and confronted intellectual currents that were invigorating but potentially threatening to their faith. The Union and Yale professors in particular struggled to tame German biblical and philosophical criticism to fit American evangelical convictions. German models that encouraged a positive view of early and medieval Christianity collided with Protestant assumptions that the church had declined grievously between the Apostolic and Reformation eras. Trying to reconcile these views, the Americans came to offer some counterbalance to traditional Protestant hostility both to contemporary Roman Catholicism and to those historical periods that had been perceived as Catholic, especially the patristic era.
