Questions:

- Why must a pencil be used to draw the baseline on the chromatography paper?
  - You should not be used because the chromatography paper is treated to repel any moisture or compounds. If you do, the ink will dissolve and be dispersed, which will mix with the dyes and interfere with the results.
- Why is it important to stop the chromatography before the solvent reaches the top of the paper?
  - It is important to stop it because without knowing where the solvent reaches the top, you will not be able to calculate the Rf without confusing the distance from the origin to the solvent.
- Why is it important to keep the dye spots above the solvent front?
  - It is important to keep the dye spots above the solvent front so that the solvent does not dilute the dye and make the results less accurate.
