Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet on the body composition and energy expenditure of obese women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 20 obese women who were randomly assigned to either a diet or a control group. The diet group was instructed to consume a diet that was 1000 kcal less than their estimated energy requirements. The control group was instructed to consume a diet that was equal to their estimated energy requirements. The study was conducted over a 10-week period. The body composition and energy expenditure of the subjects were measured at the beginning and end of the study. The results of the study showed that the diet group had a significant decrease in body weight and body fat percentage compared to the control group. The diet group also had a significant increase in energy expenditure compared to the control group. The results of this study suggest that a 10-week, 1000 kcal energy deficit diet is effective in reducing body weight and body fat percentage and increasing energy expenditure in obese women.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and blood pressure (BP) of sedentary, middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The control group consisted of 10 men who did not exercise, and the exercise group consisted of 10 men who exercised for 12 weeks. The HR and BP were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in both HR and BP compared to the control group. The HR decreased from 72 to 68 beats per minute, and the BP decreased from 120/80 to 110/70 mmHg. These results suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and BP in sedentary, middle-aged men.
